Splinternet: the inexorable dislocation of the Internet?

The Splinternet—a contraction of “split” and “Internet”—corresponds to the Balkanisation of the network of networks under the effect of technological and political factors. Between cyber-sovereignty, trade wars, and the desire for censorship, it is progressing step by step.

Space: learning to reconcile reliability and security

We all depend on the smooth functioning of the satellites that orbit a few hundred and thousands of kilometres above our heads. Whether it is to help us locate ourselves and find our way, to find out what the weather will be like in the next few days, or to communicate over long distances.

Does cyber insurance no longer provide insurance?

The insurance world is facing major changes. A few years ago, AXA's CEO Henri de Castries said: “a world 4 degrees warmer will be impossible to insure.”

In recent years, insurance companies have seized the opportunity of the new cyber insurance market.
